

Women's Foreign Policy Group

A collage of images featuring various women, likely members of the Global Women's Leaders Council, speaking at podiums or in formal settings. The collage is framed by a blue geometric pattern. The images include: a woman in a yellow headscarf and yellow top; a woman in a red and black plaid jacket; a woman in a grey blazer with a New Zealand flag; a woman in a blue patterned headscarf and blue shawl; a woman in a blue sleeveless top at a podium; a woman in a red top; a woman with short grey hair; and a woman in a pink and blue sari.

About the Guide & Women's Foreign Policy Group

The Women's Foreign Policy Group publishes the Guide to Women Leaders in International Affairs to highlight women leaders shaping foreign policy around the world. The Guide provides an index of prominent women from across the international community, including heads of state and government, government ministers, leaders of international organizations and corporations, American officials and diplomats, and women representatives to the US and the UN. This free publication is available online and is distributed to our members and partners.

WFPG is a non-partisan membership organization that promotes and supports women's leadership by highlighting and providing greater visibility for women leaders in foreign policy, amplifying their voices, and raising up role models for the next generation. The WFPG is committed to bringing together women of diverse backgrounds and expanding the foreign policy dialogue across political divides and generations. To learn more about WFPG, visit wfp.org.

Ana Brnabić

In June 2017, Ana Brnabić assumed office as the Prime Minister of Serbia. She is the first woman and the first openly gay person to hold this position. Not only was Brnabić's appointment monumental in Serbia, but it was also groundbreaking internationally, as Brnabić is the second female LGBT head of government in the world. She previously served as the Minister of Public Administration and Local Self-Government.

Out of 195 UN-recognized countries, only 18 have women elected heads of state or government.

That's less than 1 in 10

Lea Giménez

Lea Giménez's 2017 appointment as Paraguay's Minister of Finance was revolutionary in two ways. Not only is she the first woman to occupy this position, but she is also the youngest Minister of Finance in Latin America. Prior to joining Paraguay's Ministry of Finance, Giménez worked as a staff economist at The World Bank, promoting equitable development in Asia and Latin America. She holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Lehigh in the US.

Christine Lagarde

Christine Lagarde is the Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund. She was first elected to this position in 2011 and then was re-elected in 2016 for a second five-year term. She led the IMF during the 2012 Greek financial crisis, for which she faced significant scrutiny and criticism. Lagarde is a French politician who previously served as France's first female Minister of Finance, Economics, and Trade. She was listed at number 8 on the 2017 Forbes 100 Most Powerful Women List.

Feminist Foreign Policy

In 2018, Canada became the second country to publicly adopt a feminist foreign policy. Canada followed the example of Sweden, which has promoted a feminist foreign policy since 2014. The goal of the initiative is to promote the empowerment of women in foreign affairs sectors, from development to trade. Currently there are two female representatives of feminist foreign policy in Washington: Ambassador Karin Olofsdotter of Sweden (left) and Ambassador Jennifer Loten, Permanent Representative of Canada to the OAS (right).

María Emma Mejía Vélez

María Emma Mejía Vélez is the permanent representative of Colombia to the UN and a founding member of the Group of Friends for Gender Parity. The group was originally founded with the aim of supporting a female candidate for UN Secretary General but has devoted itself to more generally promoting gender parity across UN leadership. Previously, Ambassador Veléz served as both Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of Education in Colombia. She has a background in the non-profit sector and in journalism.
